Success in Dr. D's Online Class

Doing well in any online class is not easy; especially not ones taught by Dr. D. However, with HARD WORK and DILIGENCE it is achievable.
A course online allows students to work at their own LEISURE. This can be both good and bad, in the sense that some people work better from the comfort of their bed, while others get LOST in the shuffle and forget to do assignments. It is important to stay on top of your work. NEVER put it off for a different day or time because 9:00 A.M. rolls around very quickly. By the time you realize you have a question it may be to late.

Since, in many cases, you never actually get to meet your teacher in person it is sometimes hard for them to get to know you. Yet, you can still show PERSONALITY and style through writing proficiently. It's important you DO NOT rush through your work because it will show lack of effort, and most likely not answer the question EFFIECIENTLY.

A TERRIFIC grade in this class is ACHIEVABLE if you follow the along with these few keys...

Citations

When using quotes or direct titles from a literature source a citation is always required. A citation is needed to tell readers where you got this information. Dr. D reminds students to put these details into their work each week, even showing them on the syllabus how it should be set up. It is important that she instills this trait of including citations in her students because in the career world citations are always necessary.

THE SYLLABUS

THE KEY TO SUCESS

The syllabus is a break down for the whole semester. This document includes due dates/times, and assignments. The due dates are laid out far in advance, so late work is really unacceptable. Each assignment is mapped out with exactly what Dr. D is looking for. The prompt for each week is very specific and if followed in detail, a suitable grade is forthcoming. Checking the syllabus weekly allows for knowledge of what is to come in future assignments, and can allow you to get a jump-start.
